You are incredibly careless and we may have missed an opportunity for a better placed story. U knew I would be upset by what u did. U should have enough respect for me and my involvement in making this letter happen. U r not trustworthy. I am relieved lehane does not have the letter. Did he talk to the reporter at all? Even to make an introduction?

Lehane does not have the letter. He suggested an AP reporter in New York to whom I sent the letter and this reporter, whose name is David Caruso, is supposedly doing something that will go on the wires tomorrow morning. He said he knows Cohen and is going to call him to get the letter from him.

When you yell and curse, we have no way of making intelligent decisions. I had no idea of your apparent bitterness toward Lehane or the context of your thinking. I have every right to consult with people who advise me on this case. You told me to do what I want, and then you hung up on me. So I took your advice.

That's where it stands. AP is planning to put it out tomorrow. I have not sent it to anybody else. In light of this, we should circle back and decide how to handle this.

I can not believe you would play so fast and loose with something like this letter from Cuomo. This is really inexcusable. I stick my neck out to get Andrew to do this for you, my client, and then this is the way you repay me. Andrew has no interest in doing this. He is doing this for me. Because I asked.

Have you given the letter to Lehane? I am hoping not, but if you have, tell me. Cohen will kill me if he finds out this letter is in Lehane's hands.

Has the letter gone to a wire service reporter. If so, who?

If not, then do NOT give it to a wire service reporter yet.

Let's play this out. I got you the WSJ article, even though you thought it would never happen. There are people in this world – other than yourself – who know how to get things done. I know that's hard for you to believe, given your own incredible fascination with yourself.
